CHAPEL IN THE PINES HAS POETS!

SAVE THE DATE

NEW! Several of our members published their words in a new poetry book compiled with The Local Church, a Pittsboro United Methodist congregation. On Sunday, June 28, come to the Hall for All immediately following worship to hear these poets read. As Brent Levy, pastor, wrote in the introduction, the poems gathered here are “honest, hopeful, and human.” We will have a feast of words. I will also have some snacks and refreshments! Come and see.

Volunteer Success Stories

At the beginning of Sunday worship, we are going to feature a short testimony from one of our volunteers about a particular activity they found meaningful through our church. In addition, I am going to use this part of the newsletter to highlight other volunteer success stories. As such, I offer the words of Leslee Shell.

In hope,
Andrew

One Wednesday morning last month, I took breakfast to the teams of men and women learning English in our Hall for All. The atmosphere was one of quiet concentration as our CITP's dedicated volunteer tutors taught O'Mara Landscape workers.

As a former tutor at O'Mara's, I was impressed with the courage of men who brave the North Carolina weather each day and still have the desire and energy to learn English. Credit must go to their employer, James O'Mara, who pays their salary for the hours they learn English. Huge thanks must also go to our Chatham Literacy tutors, who prepare and teach without pay, and sincere appreciation to Pastor Andrew and our session, which graciously provides a quiet and safe space to teach and learn.

When the breakfast casseroles were set out, they thanked me, and some shook my hand. It was gratifying to know our church had provided a caring oasis as an antidote to the environment outside our walls. Thank you, Chapel in the Pines!
